The dynamic London based electronic duo SpectraSound has delighted fans with their recent performance, headlining the 7th annual Outlook Festival in Croatia! The duo have been honing their skills since their formation in 2006 and have amassed a huge global following. SpectraSound have created a unique sound, which combined the genres of electronic, drum n bass as well as deep house, no doubt being the reason for their recent inclusion in Outlook Festival's 2014 lineup!

Outlook Festival is the largest Bass music and Soundsystem Culture festival in Europe, where over 400 acts were lined up along the beach around 150 year old Fort Punta Christo in Pula, Croatia for the Outlook Festival. Outlook prides itself on selecting acts, which are not mainstream or commercialized. The festival selects acts, which are genuine underground dancefloor, hous, techno, dubstep, reggae, dub, hiphop, garage, grime and electronica music.

SpectraSoul should definitely be on your radar if you are looking for well-crafted, experimental electronic music, which pushes the envelope. The duo's debut album "Delay No More" is receiving hug amounts of fan praise and international success, and shows the duo moving from strength to strength.

In their own words, SpectraSoul describe their latest musical offering as; "a reflection of where we've been, a glimpse of the here & now, and a sign of where we're going, musically. Drawing influences from our broad spectrum of musical taste, we aimed to find a happy medium between writing functional and self-indulgent music and we hope that the resulting tracks are a testament to this ideology. Ultimately, it is honest, expressive, and devoid of grand concepts or preconceptions. Described simply, 'Delay No More' is an outpouring of our thoughts, ideas and personalities that have been collected, curated, and bound; We want the listeners to immerse themselves in it and decide what it means to them, and take from it what they will. We sincerely hope that you enjoy it."
